TARGET AUDIENCE

This course is intended for nurses and public health staff who are actively engaged in the identification, case management, and treatment of patients with tuberculosis infection or disease.

PREREQUISITES

There are no prerequisites for this course, but prior completion of Heartland National TB Center's Introduction to TB Nurse Case Management Online course is highly recommended.

COURSE GOAL

The goal of this course is to provide participants with essential knowledge and skills for TB case management to improve clinical outcomes.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

Upon course completion, participants will be able to distinguish between latent TB infection (LTBI) and TB disease, identify processes for management of LTBI and TB disease, define the role of the nurse case manager in providing care to individuals with LTBI and TB disease, apply principles of patient-centered care to nurse case management of TB, identify approaches for multidisciplinary collaboration with partners, and utilize nurse case studies to identify the aspects of assessment, diagnosis, and treatment of TB.

COURSE FORMAT

This course will be web-based via Canvas and Microsoft Teams and will include pre-recorded presentations with interactive discussions and case studies. Participants will have ample time for questions and answers.

SYSTEM REQUIREMENTS

To access and view course meetings, you will need a computer with internet access. Audio for this web-based training will be through your computer's speakers. We recommend that you check your system for compatibility and connectivity prior to the event. Instructions to test your system will be sent with your registration confirmation. If you have any questions about connectivity or audio, please contact Lauren Fields at Lauren.Warren-Fields@uthct.edu.
